AL-AMTHAL WINS MS CERTIFICATION

Bahrain-based Al-Amthal Group yesterday announced its Optimum ERP product had become the first in the GCC to get Windows Server 2008 R2 Microsoft Certification.

In a statement the technology and information services provider said: "Optimum ERP is a suite of business solutions addressing financial, trade and human resources management needs across multiple industry sectors."

The firm added that the certification had also brought the Hyper-V designation to the company, which demonstrates that its solutions have passed Microsoft's mission-critical standards for a virtualised environment.

Commenting on the development, Al-Amthal Group Managing Director Hani Awachi said: "We are delighted to announce that our flagship Optimum ERP has received this prestigious and internationally-recognised certification."

"What is even a greater source of pride is that this is the first locally developed product of its kind to receive this certification."

"Building on its ongoing success and strong demand for its products and solutions, Al-Amthal expects to further expand its regional network with the opening of an office in Oman before year-end 2011," he added.
